259		X		A complaint came in that the grab'n'go cooler in the deli had gone out and the sliced ham, turkey, and chicken had warmed up into the 60's. Upon arriving at establishment, I spoke with store manager, John Royse, who had gotten an alert that the units had warmed up to 43 degrees. He stated he felt no air flow while the unit was in defrost and pulled all the product out and placed directly into another cooler. John then showed me the alert system that is installed on all units and pulled up the timeline for the grab'n'go cooler. It shows 15 minute increments and when the unit hit 43 degrees it took another 30 minutes for the unit to get back down to 38 degrees. John put in a call for maintenance to service the unit since he was worried that the air flow stopped during the defrost cycle.	CORRECTED IMMEDIATELY
